OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE FOR LAST FISCAL YEAR.

A Good Surplus Reported by Minister of Finance—Our Public Indebtedness—Celebration of the Twelfth—Political Rumors—The Public Debt.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Ont., July 12.—The Orangemen of this district, and for that of it throughout Ontario, are to-day celebrating the "glorious twelfth" with considerable eclat. The mode and manner of doing so are considerably different from past years, some of the old-time fervor giving place to demonstrations and picnics, which are more in keeping with the tenets of the order and less objectionable to those who are opposed to the society. In addition to the usual resolutions customary to be passed in favor of the cause which the "glorious and immortal memory" of King William will for ever stand connected with, votes of confidence were expressed in the Equal Rights party, as well as the standard bearers of that party in the last Provincial election, who fared so badly in the fight. All passed off pleasantly, no incident being recorded which would tend to mar the day's proceedings. Speaking of the Equal Rights Association, it may be said that one hears but little of the organization since the last Provincial elections in Ontario. This has given rise to a feeling in Liberal quarters that the main forces in the body had their existence for the purpose of ousting Oliver Mowat more than to punish those who voted in favor of the Jesuit Estates Act. Whether this be the cause, or the fact that the overwhelming vote of the Province was against them, it may not be necessary to enquire, but at all events little has been heard of Equal Rights for some time past, and there is good reason for believing that politics will sooner or later divide them, the Grit returning to his party, the Tory to his.

DOMINION FINANCES.

The Dominion finances for the past fiscal year, which ends June 30th last, will show a handsome surplus. All Governments, whether Tory or Grit, are fond of sounding their own praises when able to record a surplus. Sir Richard Cartwright, for instance, was held up to public obloquy as the great champion of deficits. But there are two sides to this question. Those who argue for large surpluses evidently forget that every cent which is collected over and above the actual revenue required for transacting the business of the country is so much money unnecessarily extracted from the pockets of the people. While it is necessary that the liabilities of the Government should be met, still it is objectionable, in fact outrageously wrong to increase the taxation on the people when there is a surplus on hand, as was done last session of parliament. It was all the more annoying to see these taxes imposed on the necessaries of life. The surplus ought to be devoted to decreasing the cost of the workingman's living instead of increasing it so that any Government may have an opportunity of boasting of a large surplus on hand. So that any one can see that the mere existence of a surplus does not go to show the eminent qualification of any one for Finance Minister more than a deficit tending to illustrate the unfitness of one for that post.

THE REVENUE.

When delivering his budget speech Hon. Mr. Foster estimated the revenue to be collected at $69,200,000 as follows: From customs, $24,000,000; from excise, $7,000,000; and from miscellaneous, $8,200,000. There has been paid into the treasury already, $38,843,173, namely: From customs, $25,700,000; from excise, $7,350,000; and from miscellaneous $7,793,500. When payments are made during current and succeeding months on account of the last fiscal year come to be added there is every reason to believe that Mr. Foster's estimate will be reached if indeed it will not be exceeded. This is the largest revenue yet collected. The following brief summary will show how rapidly our taxation has been increased during the past few years—in fact considerably more than the increase in our population would warrant.

	Total.
1886	$23,567,000
1887	33,799,000
1888	31,961,000
1889	35,744,000
1890	38,782,000
1890	39,500,000

The revenue for 1890 is taken roughly. It will therefore be seen that the revenue during ten years has increased 70 per cent. To secure this the taxes of the people were accordingly increased.

THE EXPENDITURE.

The expenditure already made for the past fiscal year reaches $30,039,772, but several large payments have yet to be made which will reach about $36,500,000. The surplus will therefore reach $2,700,000, or probably $3,000,000. This sum was only reached five times since confederation.

THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The total net debt of the Dominion at the close of June was $238,875,641, a reduction of $878,693 during that month. No one will deny that the sum is not exceedingly large for a young country like Canada to carry. We are told by the Conservative party and press that we have got good value for this indebtedness in our expenditure on railways, some $82,000,000 going soon to the Canadian Pacific, and to speak of been operated by the Government at a loss for years past. Then there is our canal enlargement, surveying of lands in the North West, and the debts which have been assumed of the various Provinces. The interest on the public debt since confederation amounts to $167,000,000, so that the sooner Canada ceases borrowing and commences to pay off her national indebtedness the better it will be for the country. In delivering his budget speech more than a year ago Mr. Foster admitted this fact, and gave a rosy colored statement how Canada was to be clear of debt in the near future. It is therefore gratifying to see that something in that direction has been done, although not so much as probably the Finance Minister would have liked.

A DEARTH OF NEWS.

There is a dearth of news at the capital in these days, and newspaper correspondents—if we except those connected with the American press, who require no facts to make up a dispatch—have considerable difficulty in making bricks without straw. The only item of news in political circles is the renewing of the rumor that Sir Adolphe Caron will leave the Government, or as some will have it, that he is to be removed. I cannot say what truth there is in the story which has already been often told, but the Grit and Independent press are pursuing the Minister of Militia with a vengeance. The Citizen, the Government organ here, came to his rescue and demanded particulars of the charges against the Minister. The Ottawa Free Press, the Globe and Mail quickly respond, and enumerates long list of the politicals crimes and general inefficiency of Sir Adolphe. Another reason why he is expected to resign, is that he cannot get re-elected in his constituency, which went Grit in the Local at the last election. These rumors I give your readers for what they are worth. SLABTOWN.

NAUTICAL NOTES.

Items of Interest Along the Water Front—General Marine News.

The steamer Elliott brought down her usual cargo of live stock and produce last evening.

The Rainbow sailed for Bute Inlet and way ports this morning well loaded with a general cargo.

The steamer Umatilla arrived from San Francisco at 8:30 this morning with 300 tons of freight for this city.

The bark Antoinette, lumber laden for Valparaiso, will be towed to sea by the tug Pilot to-morrow morning.

On her trip north log-towing, the tug Pilot lost a propeller blade. A spare one aboard was fixed on and the steamer proceeded without much delay.

The new cruiser San Francisco, just completed at the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, was to run her trial trip to-day or to-morrow. Capt. Goodall will be in command.

A pinnacle rock is reported as having been sighted in Saginaw channel, Alaska, with only seventeen feet of water over it. It is nine miles northeast and one-half mile north of Point Retreat, one and three-quarters miles northwest and seven-eighths of a mile west from the north end of the outer Barlow Islet.

A dispatch received at the Merchants' Exchange, San Francisco, states that the British ship Derbyshire arrived at Queenstown on Saturday. She left Frisco on December 21st last in command of Captain Williams, with a cargo of 58,366 centals of wheat, value $49,748, shipped by Starr & Co. It is 179 days since the Derbyshire left, and she must have encountered bad weather to make so long a trip.

The Frisco papers say that there was considerable grumbling among the boatmen and bargemen who ply their business in the stream when it was known that the Warspite, the flagship of the British Pacific squadron, has arrived at Victoria with Admiral Hotham aboard without touching at San Francisco. As the Warspite, had she put in there, would have been the largest ship ever to have entered the port, and, as she is a first-class battle-ship, the boatmen naturally expected to rake in a good harvest from people who desired to visit her.

The Chilian bark Antoinette, now at anchor in the Royal Roads, was formerly the Nova Scotia vessel Lady Vere de Vere. She was built at Maitland, N. S., by Mr. Smith, who is now of the Star shipyard in this city, in 1877. The Lady Vere de Vere was when new one of the largest vessels of her class. She was placed in the South American trade, and getting old was condemned and sold at Callao a few years ago. She had been damaged by a terrible storm at the time, but was subsequently repaired and has since been doing good work as a lumber carrier.

CITY POLICE COURT.

(Before Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., P. M.)

Jim Thompson, a smiling son of the forest from Alert Bay, was the first delirit to stand up in the dock this morning and plead guilty to the charge of drunkenness, and add $5 to the city's assets.

Another drunk, who was badly battered up, was fined $5 and $2 costs. The latter amount was levied, as the aforesaid drunk positively refused to walk and the police were bound to have him at all hazards and a hackman was patronized.

Two artificers from H.M.S. Warspite were next called. The first for breaking leave was ordered to be handed over to the naval authorities, and the other for attempting to desert was remanded until to-morrow, so that the party who supplied him with civilian's clothes can be prosecuted.

Bob Lewis was next called to answer to the charge of robbing one J. Neilson. Neilson, the prosecutor, swore that last night he was lying on a bed in a cabin sound asleep, when a man came in and caught him by the throat and told him to get out of there. When he came out of the house he missed his purse containing $15. He recognized Lewis' voice but could not see any one.

Annie, an Indian, deposed that the last witness called in her house at six o'clock last evening and laid down. The prisoner came in and threw the last witness out. She did not see any money on Neilson.

Another witness swore that he heard no noise in the house from the time Neilson went into the house until the prisoner went there.

His Honor did not consider that the evidence was sufficient to implicate the man and he was accordingly discharged.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

THE GRENADIER GUARDS EMBARK FOR BURMUDA.

No Change in the Position in the Wellington Strike—An Interesting Budget of News from the Capital—No Libelling Between Bismarck and the Emperor.

MELBOURNE, July 21.—The premier has introduced in Parliament a railway bill providing for the construction of 1,078 miles of country lines and thirty-nine miles of suburban lines which are to cost £35,000,000, besides a grant from the treasury of £3,000,000. He says the schemes was necessary in order to meet the growth of population, which, as the census proved, was increasing faster than the population of America. The bill was well received.

Ballots for Socialists.

DRESDEN, July 22.—In the Saxon Diet Bismarck denies that there is any hostility between the emperor and himself. He was a loyal adherent of the Hohenzollerns, although he differs with the emperor on the question of socialism. The emperor decided to try to induce the Socialists to maintain a peaceful attitude by means of concessions, but he (Bismarck) believed in fighting them as blackmailers. The sooner they were defied the better. The time would come when socialism would be found to be a military question, and in place of the present mild state of seige there would be a universal state of war.

Stopping Sunday Games.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 20.—During the Rochester-Columbus game this afternoon, Justice Coy and several constables and Law and Order League men from Irondequot appeared on the grounds and ordered the stoppage of the game. The spectators hooted and ordered the continuance of the game, and for a few minutes it looked as if there might be a riot. Finally the officials induced the officers to allow the game to continue, and after it was over General Brinker went before the Justice of the peace and vouched for the appearance of the players, who will be examined to-morrow.

Amateur Photographers.

PORTLAND, July 19.—A commotion was caused in the Chinese quarter last evening by two amateur photographers who invaded restaurants, opium joints, gambling dens and other buildings and took photographs by flash light. The Chinese were much astonished and not a little alarmed, but soon found out what was going on and mobbed the artists, who were forced to beat a hasty retreat. They, however, secured several pictures, which they think unique, but will not try the experiment again.

THE GRENADIERS.

The Guards Sent to Bermuda for Insubordination.

LONDON, July 22.—The Guards will be deported for insubordination, and ever since the fact was made public the barracks have been besieged by wives and sweethearts. The excitement for the past day or two was very great. The trial of most of the mutineers has resulted in one being sentenced to two years and three to eighteen months' imprisonment at hard labor.

LONDON, July 22.—The Grenadier Guards embarked at Chatham to-day on the troop ship Lamar for Bermuda. They paraded at day break, and marched to the Victoria station. Twenty thousand people accompanied them and cheered incessantly. They embarked in good order.

DOMINION CAPITAL.

A Tax Decrease—Ottawa Mortality—Out of Employment.

OTTAWA, July 22.—At an early hour this morning the tug Resolute, belonging to Ald. Haney, took fire at her moorings, foot of the canal locks. Those on board being in bed at the time escaped in their night clothes. The tug was cut loose to save other boats along side, and presented a weird spectacle as it floated down the Ottawa in a mass of flames. Loss, $4000.

Winnipeg's death rate for the past month is 9 per thousand. London is the lowest with 7 and Montreal highest with a fraction over 37.

John Cantwell, 12 years of age, was drowned in the Ottawa. The body has not been recovered.

Lemieux, whose body was found last evening, was buried to-day.

Ex-Mayor Howland says that if the city pays the interest on the money, he will find the money to bridge the Ottawa between here and Hull.

There are nearly 1500 men who work in connection with the lumbering industry out of work. This is owing to the dullness in the market, both in Canada, Britain and South America.

OTTAWA, July 22.—Fresh capital is to be issued by the C. P. Co. in connection with its new Oriental steamship service.

The winnings of the Canadian team at Wimbledon yesterday were $120.

Victoria's ratio for the death rate in June is only 12.5 per 1,000. Montreal is very high with 31.

Permission has been refused by the Customs Department for the exportation of two fawns to a park in New York, as the law strictly prohibits the exportation of deer.

COURTED BY PHOTOGRAPH.

A Canadian Marriage Which Has an Event at Point Iroquois.

[illegible] July the Warspite [illegible] a ripple of excitement on Saturday at Rat Portage over a romantic courtship and marriage of a Rainy River settler. The groom was Robert Gill, the teacher of the Indian school, and the bride Miss Emily Taylor, of Owen Sound. Neither of the contracting parties had seen the other, but had corresponded and exchanged photos. The groom arrived early in the week to meet his future wife, expecting her on Tuesday, but in this he was disappointed, but on Saturday last was more successful.

The train arrived as soon and the citizens, being aware of the approaching meeting, turned out in large numbers to see the event. As the train drew in a trim looking young lady jumped off the car, and her large dark eyes rapidly seized up the crowd to see her lover's one.

Mr. Alexander Rocking of Elm river, acted as master of ceremonies, and at once took the young belle in charge. He introduced the pair, although he had never met the young lady, and the groom seemed greatly elated over the prize he had drawn. The crowd set up a laugh and could hardly resist a cheer when the party marched off for a marriage license. All the ministers in town were down at the station, but of course none of them were looking for the job. At any rate the pair were tied fast and hard shortly after the arrival of the train.

TWO NOVEL SUITS.

A Mortgage on a Man's Liberty—Action Against a City.

CHICAGO, July 19.—A decision was rendered by Judge Tuley in a case involving a question said never to have been passed upon before in court. It was a suit of Oppenheimer & Co., manufacturers of sausage castings, Chicago and New York, to prevent by injunction George Sayre, formerly their employee, from going into the same business in Illinois and 10 other states within three years of the date he ceased to be in their employ. The consideration named in the contract was $1.

Judge Tuley decided that as the result of modern methods of compositing it made no difference whether the contract was as to one or more states, but that as the complainant was only employed from week to week he was made to agree that for $1 and employment for one week he would mortgage his liberty of action and practically his means of livelihood for three years. The injunction was dissolved.

SPOKANE FALLS, July 19.—Suit against the city of Spokane was commenced in the superior court to-day. B. Harris, whose merchandise store was destroyed by fire January 30, 1889, brings suit against the city for the recovery of $15,000, the value of the stock of goods destroyed. He alleges that, owing to the great depth of snow on the ground at the time of the fire, the firemen were unable to get the hose carts and engines on the ground in time to be of service in extinguishing the fire, the city having failed to provide horses to haul the apparatus; in neglecting to provide horses for this purpose, plaintiff alleges that the city was responsible for the loss of his goods hence the suit.

If this suit is successful, several other business firms, as well as insurance companies who suffered loss by fires before the city authorities provided horses for the fire department, will at once institute suits for damages, aggregating many thousands of dollars.

THE EVICTED.

No Change in Situation—Tents Hourly Erected—Reported Accident.

NANAIMO, July 21, 8:30 a. m.—There is not any likelihood of an alteration of affairs at Wellington. Loads of furniture arrive daily here per teams, and rows of tents are hourly being erected at Cranberry, between Northfield and Wellington. Vancouver has come out generously with cots and canvas.

Just reported, a boat upset in the harbor and three children in it.

TO WARD IT ALL OFF.

A dog howled at me in the dark;
A toad came from his hole to croak;
And the devil sat in upper spat
At me beneath the fruit oak;
And, as it never croaked before,
I broke yonder swinging dairy door.

There was death's head in the fire,
As hour ago I broke a glass;
And down the lane I saw a train
Of shadowing, ravenening phantoms pass;
I see those ghostly shadows go
Where broods the gruesome carrion crow.

The fan I dropped outside the door
Some evil sprite hath whisked away;
The candle burns awry and blue
In flames where bands of men decay.
The picture in my cup portends
The loss of riches, health, and friends!

INVOCATION.

I put these pence upon this pane
And these green sticks upon this shelf,
I set them down for Sweetbrown,
My own daughter little elf;
To her pence, nut cards, dear fay, and be
Protector of this house and me!
—Eugene Field.

RALPH, THE ROVER.

"Here, Ralph! Ralph! Hi, you scamp! Come back here, sir! There, he's gone! Off for a two or three days' tramp again. Beg pardon, sir! I didn't see you. I was that busy callin' the dog I reckon I nearly walked over you. The matter, sir? Well, it's that dog, Ralph. You heard me call him, I dare say. A grander old fellow you couldn't find in a day's travel, but he has one bad habit. Most humans have more than that, and I ain't sure in my own mind that he ain't human.

"'The habit?' Well, it's just this: he will follow every blessed old tramp he passes here, and keep followin' 'em, sometimes, for two or three days. He's a queer cuss. Did you notice him just now? Didn't see him? Well, he keeps just far enough behind the fellows so they won't drive him back, sniffin', sniffin' along, and kind of castin' his eye back to let me know he's hearin' me but not heedin' me. Just the same way he acts every time he goes off. He'll be back all right, when he does come; and he's been actin' that way ever since I've had him. 'Stolen?' Why, sir, I don't believe the one's livin' could steal him, or fasten him up over so tight he couldn't get back, ever since—an' a right queer way I got him, too.

"'Is he mine?' Well, yes, in one way; an' then no, in another. It was a queer story, anyway.

"'Tell it,' sir? Well, if I had time I might. Ah, thank you, sir! A fine gentleman like you can afford to be generous.

"Now, let me see! As near as I remember, it was June, two years ago, as I come down stairs rather early one morning to light the fire for my old woman. She warn't very strong then; the youngster there was only a couple of months old, an' I was gittin' the things all handy for her to get breakfast. When she come down the fire was lightin' an' the kettle singin'—for joy of seein' her, I'm thinkin'.

"Mollie was always a great one for fresh air, so as soon as she saw that everythin' was goin' right in the kitchen she walks to the front door, turns the key an' opens it.

"Well, quick as a flash she came runnin' back to me with her face kind of white an' scared.

"'Oh, Jim! come out here to the door. Quick,' says she.

"An' when I followed her, blessed if I don't see the rummest sight I ever did: An' there I stood, starin' like as not a eye.

"You see, these seats on the porch are rather comfor'ble to sit on, an' with the vines hangin' over this way, makes it 'most as shut in an' quiet like as a bedroom; then the posts here an' at the corner form good rests for the back. Well, anyhow, good or bad, right here, a leanin' back in the most uncomf'table way, was the trampiest lookin' tramp I ever saw, sound asleep. An' on the seat beside him, with his head on the man's lap, was the dandiest setter I ever expect to see. A valyble dog, sir, too, as I knew 's soon as I set eyes on him. I always know a good dog, bein' rather in the sportin' line myself; an' this was a genuine Gordon setter.

"Well, sir, I suppose I must have said somethin', with surprise, for to wake them both up. The dog turned the solemn'est eyes 'round at me, sakin' me not to make so much noise; an' the man, all rags an' tatters, yawned an' sat up. An' then, seein' Mollie right behind me, I'll be shot, sir, if he didn't stand up, take off his piece of a hat to her, an' begin to apologize for sittin' on our doorstep. Said he'd been 'overcome with fatigue.' My eye! for the manners of him I could hardly believe he weren't a swell covedressed in the latest fashion, with a full blooded stepper at the gate waitin' for him.

"I know I must have stared at him considerable, but, bless you, Mollie didn't spend no time a starin' till she'd asked him into the kitchen, an' when the breakfast was ready she gave him, an' his dog too, a good one.

"His feet were blistered with walkin' in shoes that left half of his feet outdoors an' half in; an' as he could scarcely take a step we made him stay with us a day or so till they got better; but he couldn't hear it, an' the only reason, I think, was that he was afraid of lourdeuin' us. But, Lord! he did as much for us as we did for him, I'll be bound. He filled the yard with kindlin's, an' I believe he'd 'a' chopped all the wo— in the village if Mollie hadn't seen his hands all blistered an' bleedin'. That give him away, sure. 'A gentleman born,' says I to myself when I see those hands.

"Then nothin' would do but Mollie must doctor an' bandage them up for him—an' while she was doin' it she heard a sound like a child trying not to cry, an' he just h— his down an' kissed her hand, an' then s— says, kind of low an' choked like, more like a groan than words, 'Oh, mother!'

"An' the way the li— the kid took to him was a caution. A m— like he was—no sense at all; only pu— ared up his fists and cried when I we— near him. He'd smile up to Robert's — oo (that was what he told us to call him) an' hold on to his finger like he was his nurse.

"Now, to be sure, sir, three days don't seem much in a life, an' you'll maybe think it foolish the store we set by both man and dog before that time was passed. Ralph would lay down beside the baby's cradle, an' nothin' would move him till his master left the room; then he'd get up and shake himself, as if it was time to go, an' he was goin'.

"Mollie said he was human; an' if a soul ever gets into an animal's body—I hear there's folks as thinks so—there was a good soul inside of Ralph.

"Yes, we all liked Ralph, an' Robert even more. The fact is he was a real gentleman — that was plain enough; brought down as low as he was by Lord only knows what. But a true gentleman, an' I know the right kind when I see them. He never let on for one moment, though, a single word about himself but once, an' that was the last evenin' he was here.

"The dog was sittin' beside him, with his head restin' on Robert's knee, when I says, kind of sudden like:

"'I bet Ralph's a very valyble dog, Robert.'

"'Yes, yes,' he says, sort of slow. 'Too valyble,' stroking Ralph's head with a lovin' hand, while the dog looked at him with just as much love. 'Twas the humanest eyes you would ever see, sir.

"'He is worth a great deal of money,' he said again, after a moment's thinking. 'I am very sorry for it sometimes. I've been in many hard straits at times, an' I've been afraid—aye, afraid of myself—that I'd be tempted to sell him. Not while I was myself, old fellow, you understand, but when I was the brute I sometimes am.'

"By George, sir! you wouldn't believe it, I dare say, but I'd take my affydavy that dog looked up, sort of sad like, and shook his head.

"To make the story short—though, all told, it was not so very long—when we came down stairs the next morning Ralph lay on the floor, guardin' his master's stick, but his master wasn't nowhere 'round.

"Tell me the dog didn't know! He knew as well as we did why it was done; that the master he loved, an' who loved him, had left him; but he had been told to watch the stick, an' with the saddest eyes, an' droopin', he lay there all day long. An' I truly believe if we hadn't got the stick away from him an' burned it he'd 'a' been watchin' it yet.

"'An' his master?' Yes, sir; gone, clean gone. An' we've never heard a word of him since. 'Ungrateful!' No sir; I don't take it so. I think he couldn't trust himself with the dog he loved, when he was himself, you see, an' so he left him where he knew he'd be well taken care of. Yes, that's the way I see it, anyhow. An' then he got so far away before the dog would quit watchin' that the scent was lost for poor Ralph. But he ain't never give up! Not a day, sir!

"'Dof' Well, there's not a tramp comes past here—an' the worse lookin' they are the wilder he is to get after them, sniffin' at their tracks; an' then his tail willdroop so disappointed like; yet he'll keep on an' follow 'em for a day, or maybe three days, till he gets sure he ain't comin' to his master, when he'll come back. Seems to me sh if he kind of thought they might know him. 'How does he find out they don't?' Bless you, sir, don't ask me, but dogs know a heap more than people think.

"He ought'a' been named Rover, for he's been in more different places 'round here than I have, an' always turns up all right when he's settled the matter.

"Why! ain't that him now, a-sniffin' along the other road? Course it is. Well now, how'd he get over there, I wonder, 'seems as if he was scentin' somethin', don't it?

"Hi, Ralph! Ralph! Ah! there he comes, a-boundin' along towards us just as he used to go for his master. Looks as if he thought he could find him, sure. See now! Ain't he a beauty?

"Here, Ralph! Good old fellow! Come here, sir! Eh! What! Straight for you, sir, he goes, without a look for me. All over you in a minute! A fine gentleman like you! What! you you, sir! Robert! Great Scott! An' Ralph knew you! Well, well, I give in. Dogs is human!"
—M. Warren Hale in Belford's Magazine.

Freaks of the Atmosphere.

The atmospheric conditions of the deserts and high plateaus at certain seasons of the year produce strange phenomena. The dry weather in Nevada has produced a host of giant dancers in Lyon county. These appearances are puzzlers to all scientists. How they brace up and hold together so long is a mystery. On a quiet, sunny day you see a little handful of sagebush soar aloft on a light breeze. Some more joins it, until it is as big as your hat, and then your body, and then sand and rocks and soil by the bushel begin to roll into the mass from the ground, ascending upward like a column. It is soon as big as a telegraph pole and all the time gaining, and ere long its top may be reaches 1,000, may be 5,000 feet. While you are watching this one probably three or four others will spring up, or half a dozen will come waltzing down from the upper end of the valley, having traveled probably twenty-five miles and torn up the soil like a steam plow in their waltzing and zigzagging. They tear up the hill sides, smash houses and suck up men like waterspouts. They go to pieces in as strange a way as they are formed.—San Francisco Examiner.

The Lord's Prayer on His Arm.

"We find strange mementoes on some of our bodies," said an undertaker of Detroit. "The other day I was preparing the body of an unknown man for burial. He had met a violent death, but there was the most serene expression on his face that I ever saw on any one. When we dressed him for the grave we found the Lord's prayer beautifully written in India ink on his forearm. It was as fine a piece of tattooing as I ever saw and it set me to thinking that perhaps that was what he depended on for comfort and that gave the peaceful look to his face."—Montreal Star.

SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

San Salvador And Guatemala Fighting—Other Disturbances.

GUATEMALA CITY, June 26.—[Per steamer San Blas to San Francisco, July 19].—Proclamations have just been issued by President Barrillos, of Guatemala, and the President of Honduras, declaring their disapproval of the murder of the late President Menendez, of San Salvador. They also declare that the country is in a state of peace, and also that they trust President Ezeta will preserve the policy of the last government, and will keep the contract providing for the union of the Central American states in September next. The proclamation also intimates that if this cannot be done by peaceful means it will be done by force of arms. Guatemala has now on the frontier a force of 2,000 troops, to protect the country and natives.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 20.—El Universal publishes an account of a battle between Guatemalans and Salvadorans, in San Salvador, in which the former were defeated with heavy loss. The Guatemalan force numbered 9,000.

A private telegram from San Salvador says the San Salvadorans captured the Guatemalan artillery in the battle, which took place on Thursday. It is rumored that President Barrillos, of Guatemala talks of resigning.

General Barrundeo, the Guatemalan refugee, has left Oaxaca to take part in the war. He will probably raise the standard of revolt in Guatemala.

The Argentine Republic.

BUENOS AYRES, July 19.—The political situation is disturbed. Reinforcements of troops have arrived and the garrison is under arms. At the close of the market yesterday the premium on gold was 200 per cent.

BUENOS AYRES, July 20.—Conflicting reports are current of the discovery of a plot against the government. A semi-official paper declares that the reports have no foundation. A national convention will be convoked in January to designate a candidate for the presidency.

A RECENTLY DISCOVERED VEGETABLE REMEDY

DROPS OF YOUTH AND GOLD

HIS SWOPPED TROUSERS.

How Captain Collier and Sheriff Wallace Got Into the Wrong Pants.

Captain Collier, a well-known river man and coal merchant of Cincinnati, related a thrilling incident in his career. He and ex-Sheriff Wallace were neighbors one summer, when the weather and the decrees of fashion forced every body, even a coal merchant and a sheriff, to wear white duck pants.

Captain Collier and Mr. Wallace were opposites in the matter of physical proportions, the captain being a large man and Mr. Wallace considerably undersized.

They had the same washerwoman, and one Sunday morning she delivered the captain's large and commodious duck pants to Sheriff Wallace and Sheriff Wallace's meager duck pants to Captain Collier.

"I was always kicking about something when I had to get ready for church," said Captain Collier, "and my wife had got so she paid little attention to me. She had the children to look after, anyhow, and naturally thought I could look after myself. But those cussed pants, they stuck so infernally that it is no wonder I growled at the laundrywoman for shrinking them, and offered to bet that if I ever succeeded in getting into the things I would never get out again. My wife did not sympathize with me, but continued to busy herself with the children, only admonishing me now and then not to be the biggest baby of all, but to stir my stumps and get ready for church. I tugged and sweat and sweat and tugged. At last I got into the confounded trousers, which were so tight at every point that they actually choked me. We were late, of course, and off we hustled for church, my wife looking after the children and leaving me to take care of myself. We got to church finally, but I think if we had had another block to walk I would have dropped dead with heart-failure or something like that.

"Not until I was walking down the aisle ahead of her did Mrs. Collier take notice of my style, and then, as she said afterwards, she thought she would sink through the floor with shame and mortification, and all on account of those abnormally tight breeches of mine, the like of which she believed had never been seen outside of a circus. She got me into our pew and concealed me from observation as best she could. She leaned over and asked me, in pity's name, where I had got those pants. I had nothing to conceal in the matter, and told her that I had got them out of the bundle that Mrs. Rubadub had brought home.

"Presently Sheriff Wallace and his family came in. The sheriff had on a pair of white duck pants that simply hung on him, and that was all. He had them turned up at the bottom and trussed up at the top, besides being reefed in around the waist. But if the sheriff had an eye for the eternal aptness of things, and particularly trousers, he must have seen that he was wearing garments that were never made for him. Mr. Wallace's pew was on the opposite side of the aisle from mine. After they had been seated a few moments I was considerably embarrassed to see Mrs. Wallace looking at my duck pants and then at her husband's. Then I saw my wife looking at Mr. Wallace's duck pants and then at mine. The two women looked at each other and laughed. The awful situation had dawned upon them, and finally it dawned upon Wallace and me. The sermon? Well, I think the minister preached a powerful sermon on eternal punishment, but I was not sure of it, and neither was the sheriff.

"When the sermon was finished I motioned for Wallace to come over into my pew, as I wished to confer with him, but he shook his head. He beckoned me to come into his pew, but I would have suffered martyrdom before I would have stirred before all those people. We sent our families out with the rest of the congregation, and when the church was empty we called the minister up to us and made a frank statement of the case to him. The preacher was a kind-hearted man and a good Christian, and through his loving kindness we were permitted to glide into his private room and exchange our trousers."—N. Y. World.

A CONSIDERATE MAN.

He Had a Question to Ask, But Was in No Hurry About It.

The most considerate people in the United States live near Ozark, Ark. One of the politest and most considerate of those people is Janson H. Sutton, a man of limited means, financially, but rich in courtesy. One day Janson, a bachelor, by the way, rode up to the fence surrounding the house of Mrs. Greg, a widow, and seeing her sweeping the yard, thus addressed her: "Ole Miz Greg, have you got time to come here a minit? I want to see you on a little matter of business."

"I am in a purty big hurry to git this yard done, Mr. Sutton, an' if your business ain't so mighty important, w'y, I'd like for you to put it off awhile."

"All right. I'll be back this way in about an hour from now, an' if you ain't busy then I'll tell you what I want. Good mornin'."

Janson rode away, and about an hour afterward he again rode up to the fence.

"Still busy, Miz Greg?"

"Yes, for I ain't got the yard done yet, an' I wanted to finish it befo' the dinner-time."

"When do you look for him?"

"Most any minit, now."

"Well, then, I reckon I'll have to wait a while longer, for I don't want you to be embarrassed on my account."

"How long would it take to attend to the business you've got on hand, Mr. Sutton?"

"Oh, not long, but we can put it off easy enough. I just wanted to ask you to marry me, but I'll wait till you git the time. Good mo'nin', Miz Greg."—Arkansaw Traveler.

AN EDITOR PARALYZED.

How Cupid Made a Successful Attack on Mr. Clugston's Heart.

Mr. Mortimer Clugston, editor and proprietor of the Doodleville Yelper, raised his head a moment to glance at the intruder, and then, with the look of intense preoccupation that may be observed on the face of a man engaged in giving his whole mind to the production of an intellectual masterpiece, he resumed his work.

Mr. Clugston was writing an appeal to his paper house. He was asking for a little more time on his last monthly bill of $19.83. In eloquent, touching and well-rounded periods he told them of the ravages of the grip in the vicinity of Doodleville, the dull times in the dry goods stores, and consequent falling off in advertising and job work. He spoke of the amounts outstanding on subscriptions that were perfectly good and would be paid in time, and promised to remit the $19.83 at the earliest possible moment. In closing he wished to express his appreciation of the accommodating spirit they had always exhibited toward him, and would take the opportunity to order 2 reams of 8-pound note heads, 500 3-ply bristol cards, size 48, 500 XX light buff envelopes, No. 6, and 1 pound of Van Blubber's roller composition.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am," he said to the visitor, "for keeping you waiting, but I was at work on something I could not lay aside."

The caller, a tall young woman of severely literary aspect, begged he wouldn't mention it—she was familiar with the strain of mental labor and its exactness.

"Many a time," she remarked, "have I been so intensely occupied in the production of a poem that even a summons to dinner has passed unheeded."

Mr. Clugston looked at her with undisguised astonishment. This was a height of literary absorption to which he had never yet attained.

"My object in calling, Mr. Clugston," she continued, "is to ask for the insertion of these lines in the next week's Yelper. There are, as you will see, nineteen stanzas. The subject is 'Spring Blossoms,' and——"

"H'm!" observed the editor, glancing at it hastily. "Miss—ah——"

"My name is Miss Gumwell."

"I have no doubt, Miss Gumwell, that this poem is one of great merit. I am not in the habit, however, of accepting poetical contributions with a view to making any—aw—pecuniary return for them."

"Certainly not, Mr. Clugston," hastily replied the fair visitor. "On the contrary, I am prepared to pay regular rates for the insertion of this production."

"To pay regular rates!" gasped the editor.

"Of course. I am no stranger, Mr. Clugston, either to the high literary merit of your paper or its value as an advertising medium. In my home in the neighboring town of Punkinville I have been accustomed for years to read it eagerly, and I feel as if I were already well acquainted with you. I have come to Doodleville to embark in business, and this poem, which begins with allusion to flowers, foliage and the glorious promise of spring-time, winds up with explicit directions to have your bonnets and hats trimmed at Miss Gumwell's millinery emporium, two blocks south of the Yelper office."

Miss Gumwell took out a handsome and well-filled portemonnaie.

"Transient advertising," she said, "according to your schedule of rates, is 15 cents per line. There are 70 lines in this poem. At 15 cents a line it would come to $10.50. Here is the money."

And she handed to the astonished chief of the Doodleville Yelper a $50 bill and waited calmly for the change.

"Miss Gumwell," exclaimed Mr. Clugston, his voice trembling with excitement, "I am a man of sudden impulses. You say you feel as if you were already well acquainted with me. In this short interview I feel as if I had gained a deeper insight into your nature than years of ordinary acquaintance could have given."

Editor Clugston loosened his collar, cleared his throat and continued:

"In matters where the finer feelings, the—the heart's holiest emotions are concerned, Miss Gumwell, sordid considerations have no place. The soul rises above them."

He handed back the $50 bill majestically, placed his hand on his heart, and in a deep, melodramatic voice he asked the question:

"Miss Gumwell, will you marry me?"—Chicago Tribune.

THE WELLINGTON STRIKE.

Whatever may be the merits or demerits of the Wellington strike, the Messrs. DUNSMUIR should bear in mind that they cannot ignore labor organizations. Capital, not the example of organization and it should be willing to take a dose of its own medicine. Labor unions have come to stay. The refusal of capital to recognize them will only conduce to their additional growth. And on the whole it is better that capital and labor should recognize each other as distinct forces, and treat on that basis. It may seem hard lines to capital, which for so many centuries has held supreme sway, that it should be compelled to treat with labor, but then on the other hand labor has suffered long enough. The better nature of civilisation revolts against the remorseless grind to which labor has been subjected since history began. Shorter hours and better wages have now attained the dignity of issues. In all strikes nowadays where labor has really had a grievance, it has obtained material and moral recognition. Labor, however, must not forget in the exultation of its newly found power that capital has rights. It may properly demand shorter hours and better wages, but when it attempts to force these by the boycott, it goes too far. Organizations thoroughly that capital cannot obtain labor, but abandon the the boycott. Capital without the brains and the hands to direct it is inert matter. Capital must be kept in motion or it wastes away.

ENGLISH POLITICS AND FALSE PROFITS.

English Liberals who live in "the Colonies" have a pleasure ensured to them in times like these that can hardly be realized by those who stay at home, and that is to read and to laugh at the Tory, and more especially the Unionists, papers, with their prophecies and their statements. On the other hand, the Unionists in Victoria, who read nothing but the weekly edition of the London Times, a paper that does not contain as much reading matter as one day's issue of Daily Times, must have their tempers sorely tried. The Unionist papers just arrived inform us that the Government will die first, rather than abandon their Public House Endowment Bill, and the telegraph has informed us that it is abandoned. The Land Purchase Bill for Ireland must be passed or the Government must resign, and the telegraph tells us the bill will not and cannot be passed and the Government has not resigned? In like manner Mr. WAINWRIGHT, the Tory Unionist, must be returned for Barrow-in-Furness and the Gladstonian has no ghost of a chance. To show we are not exaggerating we quote from the placid columns of the once statesmanlike and intelligent Spectator, which is now an hysterical Unionist:

"The Conservative candidate at Barrow, Mr. Wainwright, is a very strong one, who in 1885, though unsuccessful, polled a splendid poll at Burnley, but who did not contest the seat in 1886, when Mr. Peter Rylands came forward as Unionist candidate. Mr. Wainwright will receive not only the hearty support of the Conservatives but the full confidence of the Liberal Unionists, as Lord Hartington has himself declared in his favor. As yet the Gladstonians are supporting Mr. Duncan against Mr. Caine, though Mr. Gladstone invited to dissuade his followers from supporting so successful a marplot as Mr Caine. Whether in the end Mr. Duncan will withdraw or not, is as yet doubtful. He is evidently not at all inclined to do so, but pressure may be put upon him to play into Mr. Caine's hands. But whether Mr. Duncan withdraws or not, we hope that Mr. Wainwright will carry the seat."

The Telegraph tells us again that everything said in the Spectator and echoed in the Times, is extravagantly false and inaccurate, for the Gladstonian is at the head of the poll and the Unionist, or the late Unionist, Mr. CAINE, (who visited us here last year and is known to many of us), together with the Tory, Mr. WAINWRIGHT, are hopelessly left behind. And this, too, in a Unionist constituency.

The other day the election at Mid-Durham was declared, and the Gladstonian was returned by 2,038 of a majority; but read the Times and you will find that the Unionist was sure to win. How sad is the fate of the readers of Unionist papers which reach here fifteen full days after publication, when everything in them has been falsified by the events occurring since the papers were printed. They have our sincere sympathy.

VAGARIES OF TUPPERISM.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER, says the Globe, is said to have gone to Brussels for the purpose of seeing if anything can be done to promote trade between Belgium and Canada. It is to be hoped he may succeed. He did not make much out of his frequent visits to Spain. Let us see. We have tried to make arrangements with Spain, the Argentine Republic, Jamaica, Australia, China, France, Brazil, and now Belgium. In a few years more our agents and plenipotentiaries will have completed the circuit of the habitable globe in all probability without securing an opening. Perhaps it will then occur to the Tory NERO that it might be worth while to make a proposal to the sixty millions of people whose market lies at our door. CORDEN used to say that as a consumer of goods one American was worth a hundred Asiatics. He is certainly worth a good many Spaniards and Belgian, if only because he is so much nearer than they are. Why we can talk to him through the telephone, and reach any part of his country by rail in less than a week.

MR. FOSTER'S ACCOUNTS.

The Canadian surplus about which we have heard so much lately is not of that tangible sort which is the striking feature of that which our American cousins are trying to get rid of. "A bona fide surplus," points out the Toronto Globe, "is an excess over revenue." It is not, however, "found money." A government cannot create wealth. It can get it only by taxing the people, and the people must work in order to obtain the wherewithal to pay taxes. In Mr. FOSTER'S case, the so-called surplus is not an excess of income over what is known as ordinary expenditure, the expenditure on capital account excluded from the equation. "For the year just ended," continues the Globe, "this surplus will, it is said amount to nearly three millions; but, as the capital expenditure reached eight, there is in reality a deficit of five millions. When the government is able to boast of a bookkeeper's trick of this sort, its followers usually insist on a more generous expenditure. It is to be hoped that Mr. FOSTER may be strong enough to resist the pressure next session. The Federal debt of the United States is now under a thousand millions, or considerably less than $20 per head, while our net debt is over twice as much. If the Government has any money to spare let it apply it to the reduction of the debt. Perhaps the best way to get rid of the so-called surplus is to cut down the taxes which weigh to heavily on the natural industries."

AN AMERICAN PHASE OF THE BEHRING SEA CONTROVERSY.

Both the Post-Intelligencer and the Oregonian come to us heavily laden with Behring sea articles. The Intelligencer treats the subject under the heading of "The Larger Alaskan Question," the Oregonian discusses it under the title "Our Rights in Behring Sea." The Intelligencer takes its data from the New York Times, but expresses no opinion save that Mr. BLAINE apparently, has Lord SALISBURY in a "tight place." The Oregonian, after complimenting Admiral HOTHAM as a "clear headed as well as civil old sea dog," remarks, that it is better, perhaps, "in the interest of the world that we should not establish the rather extraordinary claim to nationalize a sea larger than the Mediterranean and open to the ocean on one side. Certainly, if arbitration goes against us, we shall not undertake to enforce it." The animus of the articles, however, is unmistakable. We are made to understand that the journals in question while disclaiming any desire to burn powder, appreciate the Russian claim to Behring sea and its subsequent transferral to the United States at its full value; we are also made to see, that, so far as England is concerned, at least, she has a diplomatic problem on hand which if settled in correspondence with British interests will reflect great credit on Sir Julian PAUNCEFOTE. The United States bases its claim to Behring sea, we quote the journals named, on these grounds:

Namely, that in the controversy of 1824-25, neither England, Russia nor the United States had a word to say about Behring Sea or any water within a thousand miles of it. England and this country successfully resisted Russia's pretensions to forbid alien vessels to approach within thirty leagues of "the great ocean," and to exclude commerce from the "open sea north of latitude 51." But Russia, in yielding this point in Section 1, made a distinct grant of privilege in trade and fish in all "interior waters," which Mr. BLAINE insists, meant, and was intended to mean, and on all sides was recognized as meaning Behring Sea.

"Then comes the fine point that England in 1825 made a similar treaty containing the same clause, thus recognizing Russia's rights in the premises and accepting fishing and trading privileges in that sea at her hands.

"It is certain that Russia treated Behring sea as her private property from early in the Eighteenth century till late in the Nineteenth, and that the world acquiesced in her theory. It is certain that she transferred to us all the rights she claimed and possessed in the east half of Behring sea, with the cession of Alaska in 1867. What these rights were is most clearly set forth in the charter to the Russian American Fur Trading Company, granted about the end of the last century. This sets forth that "We, Paul the First, have noticed the advantages resulting to our empire from hunting and trading in the northeastern seas and along the coasts of America, wherefore, by right of discovery and possession, we convey to the Russian American Company the rights * * * III. to use and profit by everything which has been or shall be discovered in those localities * * * without any competition by others. * * * X. The exclusive right * * * to use and enjoy * * * all profits and advantages derived from hunting, trade, industries and discovery of new lands, prohibiting the enjoyment of these profits and advantages * * * to those who who would wish to sail to those countries on their own account. * * * [in time is reserved for the removal of persons and property then there,] and after that nobody will have any privileges but this one company."

"This charter is properly cited as the highest proof as to what degree of ownership Russia thought she had in the premises now disputed. Nobody ever dreamed of challenging the rights of the Russian American Company, which rights are now our own. Russia is our grantor, and there is no dispute that she intended to convey, and did convey to us, all her own rights. It will not be contended in any quarter that the grant to us was in any degree more restricted than the grant to the Russian-American Company, the predecessor of the United States in these regions."

These are the grounds upon which the United States bases its claim to Behring Sea. Technically the right of the United States to Behring Sea is as good as that of Russia, but as the Oregonian points out the world is getting rid of such things as fast as it can, has got rid of them until "Behring Sea is the only mare clausum left in the possession of a civilized power, and that, probably, with the rest, will have to go though its technical and historical foundation are perfect." But here comes the point: If the question of the status of the United States in Behring Sea is left to arbitration, and the decision is unfavorable to that nation, Russia's exclusive rights will disappear also. Her seal fisheries will be exposed to the Victoria "pirates," as the Oregonian puts it. Here is where the delicate part of the business comes in. Will Russia agree to an arrangement in which her interests are not made paramount to all the others? That is to say will she not ask more than the nations will consent to give? The Behring sea question, it will be seen, is an extremely complicated one. Russia counted in. It is tolerably clear that no permanent settlement will be reached this year. This much, however, is clear: the United States and England seem to have agreed that there shall be no fighting. SALISBURY may be in a "tight place," but then the United States, in contending for a technicality which is not worth fighting for, is in a place equally as tight.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This promises to be remembered as a summer of drownings. The disaster at Lake Pepin, which apparently has cost over one hundred lives, is but the crowning calamity of a long list of minor casualties that in Canada alone, since the season opened, have numbered victims by the score. In the immediate vicinity of Montreal not a week and hardly a day has elapsed without chronicling some drowning accident. Monday morning's paper recounted three. The record can be followed back almost unbroken for weeks. Most of these have been due to carelessness, generally of the persons whose lives were sacrificed; but this does not make the loss lighter, nor, apparently, lead others to be more cautious on what is always a dangerous and often a treacherous element.

The history of Archangel, the Russian port on the White Sea, says the Winnipeg Free Press, is not without interest to us in view of the prospect of a city being founded on Hudson Bay. It is situated six degrees further north than Churchill, but for over three centuries has been a seaport of considerable magnitude. It has now a population of 25,000, and with colleges, banks, manufactories, and hospitals has many of the characteristics of the progressive city. Its connection with the interior is by the river Dwina, and canals connecting the stream with other waterways. The harbor is open only from June to October, and the facilities for transferring cargoes are poor, owing to the shallowness of the water, compelling the use of lighters. Yet during these months the White Sea is alive with vessels from all parts of the world, sailing to or from Archangel. These facts should be instructive to those who think the climatic reasons are sufficiently strong to prevent the growth of a city on the shore of Canada's inland sea.

An Arizona cow-boy is the latest patient to arrive at Dr. Gibier's Pasteur Institute. He was bitten by a skunk while sleeping on the ground. His three companions, who were also bitten, have since died. Dr. Gibier inoculated the cowboy, though somewhat doubtful whether his case comes properly under the treatment.

LIVERPOOL, B.C.

The Fraser River Terminus of the New Westminster Southern Railway,

Opposite the rapidly growing City of New Westminster, and having deep water frontage on Fraser River.

The New Westminster Southern Railway runs from Liverpool to Fairhaven, Wash., where it connects with the great Northern Pacific Railway system. The Railway Company has now under construction at Liverpool a wharf 700 feet in length, costing about $10,000, and they intend to immediately erect workshops, passenger and freight stations, etc. The road is already graded between Liverpool and Fairhaven, and it is expected that trains will be in operation between the two places by 30th August, 1890.

A portion of the town site will be on the market on and after 16th June instant, and lots will be sold at low prices for a short time, and purchasers will have the benefit of first prices.

INSPECTOR YOUNG.

TO THE EDITOR:—I observe by the press that Port Inspector Young, of H. M. Customs, who has been residing here officially for some time has gone east, "none too soon," will be expressed by many business men of this city. While Mr. Young is not responsible for many of the objectionable conditions of the Dominion customs laws, I would advise him to carry out its conditions in a civil and gentlemanly manner, which he has not always done since he has been in these parts. To be courteous is a duty that a public servant owes to those with whom he may come in contact in a business way. Nothing causes so much friction in the carrying out the laws of the country as a pompous, arbitrary and tyranical officer such as Mr. Young is. BUSINESS.

THE COLONIST'S MEDICINE.

TO THE EDITOR:—Is the Colonist preparing to jump the traces on the education question, inasmuch as it belittles the Hon. John Robson when it belittles the daily marks because he forced it upon the teachers by a special clause in a special act, although at that time there was a rule of the superintendent of education on the subject. It also belittles D. Wilson, Inspector of Schools, inasmuch as he recognized the resolution of the Teachers' Institute as of the utmost importance by insisting upon the teachers putting their names on record for or against the resolution. Will it state why it filled a column and a half on such a trifling subject; why section 9 and the rule that a teacher shall forfeit one month's salary for the violation of any regulation followed in the wake of daily marks? Poor Colonist, it takes its medicine with bad grace by casting ridicule on the head of the department and the inspector of schools. TEACHER.

CANADIAN NEWS.

Items of Interest Received by Telegraph from Different Points.

E. W. Thompson, for many years a leader writer on the Globe, severs his connection early in October.

Robert S. Saunders, a teller of the Bank of Nova Scotia, at Woodstock, N.B., has been arrested, charged with having abstracted from the funds of the bank a parcel containing $14,000. Saunders is but 21 years old.

A fire in Jeffrey & Co.'s grain storehouse, Midland, Ont., destroyed between five and ten million feet of lumber. Jeffree & Co.'s coal docks and grain warehouses and their ice houses were also burnout. The loss will reach $75,000.

Rev. Jos. Gunter, the senior Free Baptist preacher in New Brunswick, died on Sunday, aged 80, at Fredericton, after a ministry of more than half a century.

Michael Enright, a well-known oarsman, was drowned while practicing in a shell on the Don at Kingston, Ont., Monday night. No one saw the accident.

STANLEY'S AFRICA.

Stanley's "In Darkest Africa" is already an assured success in the most emphatic — that is, in the financial — sense of the term. Over and above the immense number of copies sent out Saturday and Monday last, says a London paper, the publishers are now selling 300 additional copies a day. This for a two-guinea book, and one, moreover, which was boldly subscribed for by the "trade" to begin with, is in itself a remarkable proof of the keen and widespread interest which everywhere prevails to read the book itself and not to be content as usual with a mere "review" of it.

How They Are Made.

The beauties of making American citizens out of foreigners is neatly described by Mr. Jianting in The Century. "The other day," he says, "I happened to be in the court when the judge was examining a scaly lot of organ grinders and Russians previous to naturalizing them. The first fellow he had up was an Italian, all garlic and ear-rings, and the first question asked was, 'What sort of a government is this?' 'Georga Wash, Georga Washa,' the fellow answered, like a parrot. But the judge pressed the question and on being prompted in the rear the man rallied up with, 'Si, si, Republicana.' 'Who make the laws?' was the next question, and again the answer was 'Georga Washa.' But after repeated coaching Signor Garibaldi informed the court that 'de peep' make the laws, and was then admitted to one of us—an American citizen."

THE LUCKY PENNY.

Some of the Peculiarities of Men and Women Who Carry Mascots.

The cherished preservation of odd or particular coins as pocket-pieces is an old and harmless sort of idolatry frequently indulged in by a large percentage of humanity. Such souvenirs often possess intrinsic value as well as legendary importance, but, whether represented by a bronz piece of gold or a battered copper-token, all have associations or little histories of peculiar interest to their owners. When these treasures are under inspection in a social way, remarks of the following tenor are frequently heard:

"This is the first bit of silver I earned when I left home."

"I found this half-penny near Shakespeare's tomb."

"Daniel Webster gave that Spanish quarter to my father when a boy for holding his horse."

"Here," said a man, noted for his unthrift, "is the only money I ever saved, and I wouldn't have saved that were it not made of German silver."

It is the custom for many kind old persons to say, while tendering a bright piece of silver or gold to an emigrating lad or lass: "Keep this in your pocket, and you'll always have money."

The present and injunction are, perhaps intended for a practical suggestion of thrift, although in most cases the lesson is likely to be disregarded. Few people possess the quality of economy to an extent that will allow them to join thrift to his host of abilities to make coins breed.

A large number of these coins struggle into the hands of New York moneychangers, whose locations give them daily opportunity of dealing with emigrant arrivals. While speaking of this incident in the business, one broker said: "It used to give me a pang when some poor fellow or woman would unwrap a time-smoothed piece of foreign money or remove a perforated one from a chain or faded strip of ribbon, and tearfull offer it for sale or exchange. But one soon loses sentiment in this business, and in a matter-of-fact way, I simply pay for the weight of most of such odds and ends as you see heaped in that tray. I've had cases wherein persons who had struck prosperity have returned after a long time to see if their keepsakes could be identified and recovered, but the crucible of the Assay Office had generally put them beyond hope."

Sometimes a special piece of money is kept sight of with almost religious interest. Instances are known where pawn-brokers have made advances often enough on a revered coin to make the interest exceed its nominal value many times over. It is a case of indescribable horror when the owner of a metallic "mascot" or prized talisman has paid it away in some unguarded moment. Hallowed heirlooms thus have been ruthlessly swept into the coffers of an unsentimental railroad or more profane tills. This risk is always likely to prevail, regardless of the many ways of safely storing such precious things. Nine out of ten of the devotees of these little gods would decline the use of safe-deposit boxes or bank vaults, believing as they do that the luck or charm chances of the object only become potent by personal contact.—N. Y. Tribune.

HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

—A sirloin of beef should be laid with the tenderloin down, cut thin slices, then turn and cut the other side.—Detroit Tribune.

—A beautiful bag, to be used only for soiled collars and cuffs, is made of gray China silk. It should be ten inches wide and eight inches long. The bottom is finished with tiny brass crescents and the top is drawn up with narrow blue, pink and ecru ribbons. The front is embroidered with violets and grasses.

—A very handsome and delicate toilet cushion is of rose-pink satin, ten inches wide and twelve long, painted with a design of passion flowers and leaves. The decoration is at one side of the cushion, with the slender passion vine extending diagonally across from one corner to the opposite one. The edges are finished with a full frill of four inch wide valenciennes lace.—The Home.

—Clear Soup.—Put on to boil any left-over pieces of meat, add water enough to cover well, one onion, a turnip and carrot whole; cook until the meat falls from the bones and the vegetables are tender; then strain it through a colander and again through a coarse cotton cloth or flannel; season with salt and white pepper, and it is ready for service. Pieces of poultry can be utilized in the same way.—Troy Times.

—Fresh Meat Toast.—Take bits of beefsteak or roast and chop very fine; add water sufficient for gravy; season nicely with butter, salt and pepper; let it come to a boil, and thicken slightly with flour. Lay toasted bread, one piece at a time, on platter and dip the meat gravy over it, as it moistens more evenly than to pour over all at once. We think it a palatable dish and a good way to use up scraps of cold meat and stale bread.—Toledo Blade.

—Currant Buns.—Melt a quarter of a pound of butter in a half pint of milk, but do not scald the milk; add two teaspoonfuls of baking powder into a pound of flour, add a pinch of salt and half pound of coffee sugar. Mix all into a dough with the butter and milk. Have a quarter of a pound of currants ready, and mix them in, knead well, shape into buns, and glaze with the beaten yolk of egg before baking.—Christian At Work.

THE ODDFELLOWS NEXT.

To Meet in Chicago—Largest Gathering the World Has Seen.

The largest gathering of Oddfellows that the world has ever seen will take place in Chicago next month. It will be the triennial meeting of the Grand Lodge and the grand Triennial Cantonment of Patriarch Militant of the I.O.O.F. For over six weeks the local committees in Chicago, have been holding daily meetings and working with might and main to provide for the transportation of the visitors and their comfort and convenience while in the city, and during the past two weeks their proceedings have been participated in by Grand Sire General Underwood, of Kentucky, and who has given the benefit of his time and experience to the preliminaries. The lowest rates ever known in railroad history have been granted to the Oddfellows on all the routes from the Atlantic coast to the Gulf, and the rates which have been conceded by the local hotel proprietors are in many cases little more than nominal. The city council has granted permission for the temporary erection on the lake front of a large amphitheatre with a frontage of fifteen thousand feet, and which will be large enough to hold an audience of 50,000 people. The largest halls in the city have all been retained, and the Lake Front Park will be fenced in for the purposes of the prize drill. Advices received up to this morning by Brigadier-General J. P. Ellacott, chairman of the reception committee, are to the effect that over 15,000 Patriarchs in uniform and 50,000 Odd Fellows proper have decided to take part in the event, and the probabilities are that this number will be largely increased during the next few weeks. With the visitors, and the relatives and friends they will bring with them, it is estimated that fully 250,000 strangers will be in the city during the cantonment week. Delegates will be here from England and other countries. The prizes to be offered for the drills aggregate $27,000. The great parade which is fixed for Thursday, August 7th, is expected to be of a character never equalled in the country. There are 425,000 Oddfellows within fifteen hours ride of Chichago alone, and it is expected that a feeling of western pride will induce fully one half of these to turn out for the occasion. All the reports received by the local committee indicate that extraordinary interest is being manifested in the conclave at far distant points, so much so that many small towns far down in the south and in the extreme west and northwest will send from four to five hundred Odd Fellows each.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR.—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

—AND—

FINE BUSINESS LOTS

In that new and beautifully situated portion of the city of Vancouver known as

FAIRVIEW

And being part of Lot 526.

The situation is unsurpassed, being on a gentle slope rising from the waters of English Bay and in the immediate vicinity of the proposed ocean docks.

The property is within easy distance of the handsome new opera house (now in course of erection), New Post Office, Customs House and other public buildings.

An agreement has been entered into by which the Electric Street Railway will be extended through this property and give regular service as in other parts of the city by September, 1891.

As the Corporation is now negotiating with the Water Works Co., for the purchase of their whole system of water supply it will doubtless be immediately extended to this part of the city.

The rapid growth of this wonderful young city, the western terminus of the C. P. R., with its Unrivalled Harbor, Extensive Lumber Trade, Door and Sash Factories, Sugar Refinery and numerous other industries, together with its Handsome Granite Business Blocks and Public Buildings, has only to be seen to satisfy the most casual observer that it is destined soon to become a city second to none on the Pacific coast.

In addition to the regular line of steamers now running to China and Japan it is intended shortly to have at least monthly communication between Australia and Vancouver.

The title will be sold without building conditions, but where approved buildings are erected within one year a rebate of from ten to twenty per cent. will be allowed.

TERMS OF PAYMENT.

One-third cash, one-third in six months, and one-third in twelve months, with interest at 6 per cent. on deferred payments.

City Hall, Victoria, June 3, 1890. CHARLES A. SEMLIN,

The Daily Times.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

BENEFITS CONFERRED.

Statement Showing the Good Work Done by Oddfellowship.

The half-yearly statement of the Permanent Secretary of Victoria Lodge No. 1, I.O.O.F., which was presented to the lodge at the end of the past quarter shows the important character of the work which is being performed by the noble institution of Oddfellowship in this city, and also gives a summary of assets and liabilities. The particulars refer to Victoria Lodge only, the other two lodges in the city being separate and distinct, and showing—in comparison to their membership—an equally healthy financial condition and a no less praiseworthy record as eleemosynary organizations. Who can measure the good which has been accomplished in fourteen and a half years by the distribution of over $62,000 among the sick brethren, the widows and orphans? The statistics are of interest to all.

Victoria, B.C., July 10, 1890.

To the officers and members of Victoria Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F., Dear Sirs and Brothers:

In compliance with law and in fulfilment of my duty as secretary, I beg to submit for your consideration a full report of the term just ended.

MEMBERSHIP.

No. of members January 1, 1890	169

Dues overpaid by members	102 20
		223 70
Equal to $107 per member.		$17,392 10

The total cash payments for the term was $2401.71, and the receipts aggregated $2112.20, so that there is an apparent loss of $289 51, but of this sum $141.66 for purchase of one-third interest in piano, and $25 for picture of Past Grand Master J. Davies, has been carried to furniture account and appears as an asset in that account.

There has been a loss of $79.29 in the Sick and Funeral occasioned by the heavy calls on it for sick benefits, $1442 being paid under this head, which is $292 more than the preceeding term, and $416 in excess of the total amount received for dues during the half year. It is made up as follows—78 weeks at $5; 101 weeks at $10, and 7 weeks at $6 per week. Thirty members, or about 18 per cent. of our members, have received benefits during the term. The average amount of sick benefits paid per member is $8.90 or $2.90 more than was recived as dues.

Both the Widow and Orphans' Fund and the Management Fund show reduced balances to those reported on 1st January last, the former to the extent of $48.10 and the latter $162.09.

Two hundred and seven orders were drawn on the Treasurer during the term, entailing considerable work on that officer. The duties of the visiting committee have also been very onerous, in the former part of the term as many as 14 brothers being on the sick list at one time, during the la grippe epidemic.

During the past fourteen and a half years the lodge has disbursed the following amounts for relief:

Sick benefits	$11,902 80
Funeral benefits	2,580 00
To widows and orphans	1,623 75
Nursing sick brothers	462 75
Donations to distressed brothers and special relief	339 25
Total	$16,939 55

Fraternally submitted,
FRED. DAVEY,
Rec. and Per. Sec'y.

Pure Drinking Water.

It would not be amiss just now to provide for the city hall officers a filter and water cooler for drinking purposes. At present when any of the clerical staff desire to liquidate, a journey to a tap in the entrance hallway has to be made, and the aqua pure, pins polly-wags, and other small fry, has to be taken straight. Now that the new offices are fast becoming completed, it would be in order for the city hall committee to see to this little matter.

A Melodious Mariner.

One of the blackjacks of the Warspite, who occupied the police cells the night previous, made a terrible racket by refusing to retire to his slumbers during the small hours of the morning. He kept on singing and yelling without a rest for hours at a time. The police officers sleeping in the barracks, as well as the firemen who lodge at the Tiger Hall, were greatly disturbed by the midnight melody of the mariner, and when that worthy dropped into a drunken slumber toward the morning hours, his unwilling audience were truly thankful.

Mrs. Alva Young,

of Waterford, Ont., writes, "My baby was very sick with summer complaint, and nothing would help him till I tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which cured him at once. It is one of the best remedies I ever used."

Ancient Order of Foresters.

The following officers of Court Vancouver, No. 6755, A. O. F., were installed last evening by Bro. A. Strachan, P.C.R.: P.C.R., Bro. A. Grissmer; C.R., G. Carin; S.C.R., T. J. Lindsay; treasurer, H. Waller; secretary, S. Wilson; S.W., W. B. Hall; J.W., G. Wilby; S.B., Thos. B. Norgate; J. B., R. Godding; court surgeon, Dr. Milne.

School Trustees' Meeting.

Board of school trustees meet at the City Hall this evening. Applications for teachers' positions will be submitted. It is to be hoped that the old star chamberism which in the past characterized the board in the matter of the appointment of teachers will now be done away with, and that the light of the press and public may be allowed to brighten the proceedings.

A National Song.

The national song "My Own Canadian Home," has been set to music by Morley McLaughlin, of St. John, and chosen by the military to be sung at the great meeting of riflemen on Surrey Common, England, the accompaniment to be played by the band of the London Scottish Regiment. This piece will be played shortly by all military bands throughout Canada and so become familiar to the ears of all.

Should be Looked After.

Some time ago complaint was made of the nuisance caused near the corner of Cook and Yates street by reason of a very deep excavation there, which had become filled with water to the depth of 10 feet or more. The nuisance still exists, and is enhanced by the fact that the surface is now covered by a thick green slime, while the odor emanating therefrom is not of Araby the blest. It is hoped the matter will be attended to, for the city does not need a first-class typhoid hot-bed in that locality.

A Thick Black Smoke.

About 7 o'clock this morning a great cloud of black smoke rolled up from near the corner of Blanchard and View streets, and many people thought a big fire was in progress. The smoke was the greatest feature, however, for the fire was confined to the large boiler used by the asphalt paving layers. The contents of the boiler accidentally got alight, and the tar made a great smudge. Considerable difficulty was found in extinguishing the flames, but ultimately they were smothered by iron plates and sand.

Fishing Boats Seized.

The Columbian reports that Mr. John Buie, fishery guardian, made a seizure of eight fishing boats Saturday morning for working during prohibited hours. The boats were fishing nearly opposite the city and in full view of the inspector's residence, a proceeding that certainly made it appear that they could not have been very well acquainted with the regulations. Mr. Mowat, fisheries inspector, has given the strictest orders that the regulations must be stringently enforced, and he is determined that they will be carried out to the letter.

Good Horses.

Jas. Ewing, formerly of Toronto, who arrived in this city a few days ago, has purchased the stable on Johnson street recently occupied by Jones & McNeil, and has thoroughly renovated it. Mr. Ewing came to British Columbia with the intention of going into the livery and sale stable business and he brought with him besides a number of very neat and handsome buggies, ten horses that cannot be beat. A bay team, is worthy of notice, and is perhaps the prettiest pair of horses in the city, while a pair of sorrel ponies are fast as well as pretty. All the horses Mr. Ewing took particular care in picking out and they are well adapted to the business.

New Westminster Ferry Boat.

Work is to be at once commenced on the New Westminster ferry boat to run between Westminster and Brownsville, across the Fraser. The vessel is to be a double ender, 100 feet in length. The hull is composed, as it were of two scows separated in the middle by space in which the wheel, the dimension of which is 18 feet in diameter by 6½ feet in width, will involve. On the inner side of each part of the hull will be the engines 10x48. On the fore and aft ends will be cabins of a convenient size, neatly fitted up, and connected by a long passage. One side will be for ladies only, while the other for gentlemen. On either side are the spaces 12 feet in width for vehicles, which can go on one end of the ferry and off on the other, in the usual manner. The whole of the lower floor is enclosed by a house on the top of which is another house in the centre, protecting the wheel, while on the top of this again will be the pilot house through which the smoke stack runs. The whole width of the steamer will be 40 feet, divided into spaces on either side as follows: 7 feet in the centre for the wheel; 3 feet on either side for the engines, 3 feet on either side for the passengers to walk from the cabins at each end and 12 feet on either side for carriages, etc.

SCIENCE OF MATHEMATICS

APPLICATION OF ITS PRINCIPLES FOR HUMAN BENEFIT.

An Essay Read by Mr. Thomas Nicholson, Principal of the Victoria West School, at the Teacher's Convention Held at Victoria on the 17th Inst.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: The subject I have chosen on which to base my remarks to you this evening is mathematics, although I am well aware of my inability to do justice to a subject of such importance as mathematics undoubtedly is.

Mathematics is a subject that comprehends one of the most extensive and important departments of human knowledge. By most people it is considered also as one of the most difficult, and it is much to be regretted that many with time and talents equal to the task are deterred from entering upon a study which would amply repay the expenditure of both, by this mistaken prejudice. Every science, no doubt has its hard and knotty points, and in no intellectual pursuit can distinction be attained without labor, thought and perseverance. Yet if there be one subject of scientific inquiry which, more than any other, is distinguished by the simplicity, certainty and obviousness of its fundamental principles by the irresistible evidence by which position after position is established, and by the systematic gradations by which layer ater layer of the intellectual structure is completed, that subject is pre-eminently mathematics. In other topics of research there is generally more or less of hypothesis or conjecture; there are obscure recesses into which the light of truth and demonstration cannot penetrate, and where fancy and imagination are sometimes permitted to guide our steps; but there are no perplexities of this kind in mathematics, no ingenuous theories to mislead, and no conflicting opinions to bewilder. Our progress here is exclusively under the unerring direction of Truth herself, and it is her torch alone that lights up our path.

Whether we consider the subject of mathematics in reference to its practical utility, in its application to most of the arts, or as a powerful and the only adequate instrument of investigation in the study of several classes of physical phenomena, or as an efficient instrument of intellectual culture or merely in reference to the numerous and striking abstract truths, which it makes known, it must, without hesitation, be admitted to be worthy of a prominent place in every course of liberal education. Mathematical science investigates the various relations of measurable quantity, as space, time, force, motion and velocity. Our knowledge of the objects of mathematics is obtainable from experience and its axiomatic principles are necessarily involved in our conceptions of these objects. Although the definitions of any of these are not necessarily confined to a single property, still every definition must express some characteristic property, and it cannot therefore be arbitrary. Theoretic geometry treats of the properties of magnitude, and practical geometry of their construction.

There are three kinds of magnitude—of one, two and three dimensions, respectively—as lines, surfaces and solids. Our conceptions of magnitude and of space generally, are arrived at by first acquiring a knowledge of a body by experience and by a subsequent process of abstraction. If we abstract from any body all the properties of the matter composing it, as its hardness, color, weight, and so on, and retain merely its quality of extension in three dimensions of length, breadth and thickness, we have then a strict conception of a geometrical solid, which possesses none of the properties of matter except extension, and cannot therefore possess a material existence. It is a different object from the space it occupies; for, in any limited portion of space, an indefinite number of such solids may exist, the one encompassing the other. Abstract now from any solid its thickness and we then form the conception of a surface having only length and breadth. And if from a surface one of its dimensions be abstracted, as its breadth, we have then the idea of a line, which possesses only length. The intersection of two such lines is a point which only marks position, and has neither length, breadth, nor thickness. It has been objected to this view of a mathematical point, that as it has no magnitude, it can have no existence. It has certainly no material existence, but its existence is no less real on that account. Even a line or a surface occupies no portion of space. No number of points, however great, can fill any assignable portion of space, however small. And it has been remarked, that even a solid does not occupy exclusively any portion of space. They would exist independently of matter, but their existence is no less positive though immaterial.

A system of geometry proceeds from simple, axiomatic and incontrovertible principles to the demonstrations of new truths; and from the combination of truths previously known, new truths are continually evolved and thus a system of geometrical science is established by a continued process of logical deduction. Some of the elementary truths in geometry are so obvious as to be almost self evident, but many of them are of a different character, and are striking and even beautiful, at least when the mind is habituated to contemplate abstract truth. Several propositions are, in some of their cases, axiomatic, but in other cases they require to be demonstrated. Without this distinction the demonstrations of certain propositions would appear to be unnecessary, and in such instances they are perhaps more useful in completely obviating objections than in producing conviction.

As regards the utility of the mathematical sciences, a distinct statement of the knowledge has been greatly extended by its means. Independently of the innumerable important and striking properties of magnitudes and relations of abstract quantities that it has made known and which can be sufficiently appreciated only by the mathematician, it has unfolded a very extensive range of natural phenomena. It has investigated the principles of theoretical mechanics, the laws of the equilibrium and motion of fluids, fixed and elastic; the principles of optics, or the science of vision, of electricity and of magnetism; the theory of propagation of sound and of light and a variety of other subjects. But even the most abstruse branches that appear to be incapable of any useful application ought not to be neglected, for they may be applied at some future period like the ancient doctrine of the conic sections, which for twenty centuries was an object of mere curious speculation, till it became in the hands of Newton an efficient means of unfolding the planetary motions. Without the aid of rules derived from mathematical science, the navigator relying only on his compass as a guide, could not with safety venture to any considerable distance on his element; intercourse with transmarine nations would be impossible, and consequently our knowledge of the globe which we inhabit would be very limited. We should probably still believe that its surface is an extended plane, and that it is still supported on pillars; or, as was the opinion of some of the ancient philosophers, that its figure is cylindrical like a drum. Without the aid of this science our knowledge of celestial objects would be still more imperfect, and the consequence of our ignorance still more striking. We should still believe that these objects are equally distant from us, and very probably that they are distributed on the surface of an extensive crystaline sphere, performing a diurnal rotation about the earth as the centre of the universe. We should also believe that some celestial phenomena, as eclipses and comets, are signs of the conflict of the elements of nature, or that they are portents of the wrath of heaven while contemplating to inflict on man some dire calamity, such as war, famine, or pestilence. How different from these unsatisfactory and incoherent conjectures is that great achievement of this science—the clear and satisfactory exposition on the most incontrovertible principles of the complex though sublime and systematic mechanism of the heavens, by which the distances and magnitudes of the sun and planets have been measured, and also their weights, even those of their satelites ascertained and by which the masses or distances of some of the stars or suns of other systems, though inconceivably remote, even in comparison with the great extent of our own system, will probably ere long be determined. The practical utility of mathematics is so well known and so universally admitted that on this topic it will not be necessary to make any remark. Let it suffice to call to mind that from its principles the rules of calculation and measurement are derived. It supplies the art of measuring heights, distances, surfaces and solids in artificers work, in ganging, land and marine surveying. It furnishes the principles of calculation in navigation, nautical and practical astronomy, of the arts of the optician and machinist, and also of the arts of carpentry and engineering, both civil and military. On its deductions also depends the arts of plaining, perspective, and of the construction of maps and charts. In short, wherever the construction of figures or computation is in requisition, the principles of mathematics are indispensible.

Let us take a brief view of mathematics as an instrument of mental improvement, as this is the aspect, perhaps in which as educators it merits our most serious consideration. It may be safely affirmed that mathematics as an instrument of intellectual improvement, cultivates chiefly the reasoning faculty. It also exercises the memory in a considerable degree; and it has a powerful tendency to form a habit of undivided and unremitting attention, which is indispensable for success in any pursuit. Every branch in the theory of the science consists almost entirely of an uninterrupted process of reasoning, and as this process is identical in every subject, whether of necessary or contingent truth, no other study can be more conducive to the improvement of this faculty. A step of reasoning or a syllogism, consists of a major and a minor proposition, and a conclusion; and by a law of our mental constitution whether it be called judgment or the faculty of relative suggestion, the conclusion follows as a necessary consequence from these premises in reasoning on any subject as well as in mathematics; so that reasoning is exactly of the same nature in this investigation both of necessary and contingent truth, with this difference, that in the former the chain of sequence is of almost indefinite extent, while in the latter it is generally brief. There is, however, a difference in the fundamental principles. The premises in the former are incontrovertible, at least in pure mathematics, and generally in the other branches of the science. Whereas, in subjects of contingent matter the premises are usually only probable, and the probability of the conclusion must therefore be commensurate with that of the premises.

Synthetic geometry, or the ordinary diadetic method, affords in the gradual exposition of geometrical truths, excellent specimens of the most clear and satisfactory reasoning; and that branch of it called geometrical analysis furnishes in addition examples of the resolution of truth into its simple elementary principles. But analytical geometry and the other analytical branches of the science, supply the best examples of the resolution of complex questions, a process which must be effected before the conditions can be comprised in symbolical expressions. They also accustom the mind to comprehensive views, and afford excellent specimens of subtle reasoning and exercise the mind in the interpretation of the expression of final results. In these branches, a subordinate acquirement, made at the expense of much perseverence is necessary, namely, the power of managing skilfully the concise but comprehensive logorithm employed in the research, of which, however, that part of the operations which may be considered to be in some measure mechanical will sometimes interrupt the chain of reasoning, though in the theory the application of the principles affords, in addition to the preceding kinds of intellectual exercise, examples of premises resting on probable evidence, and require habits of close reflection and accurate observation, and also furnishes the finest specimens to be found in the whole range of human knowledge, of the methods of philosophical research both inductive and deductive. In straining the mind to such researches it affords peculiar advantages, for although it is a subject of contingent matter, the rigorous nature of the investigation operates as a salutary check against those fantastic speculations that result from the unrestrained excursions of the imaginative faculty, which in original researches in other subjects, frequently produce extravagant theories, and which, from the unsettled state of the principles, may, with a little ingenuity, be made very plausible; whereas, any such theory in physics would be certain to meet speedy and complete refutation.

A knowledge of the mathematics and of the methods employed in investigating the necessary truths embodied in them, is not incompatient with a knowledge of the nature of moral evidence. An exclusive attention to any department of study may, to some extent, disqualify the mind for appreciating truth in other departments. If the mere mathematician cannot appreciate minute degrees of moral evidence, neither can the mere student of probable truth appreciate the necessity of scientific rigor in mathematical science. Both might commit serious blunders in the department to which they are strangers; and the latter, if exclusively acquainted with those branches in which the premises are exceedingly doubtful, might from the constant and bewildering uncertainty of his own conclusions, be liable to adopt a theory of universal scepticism. It is a truth readily assented to, even by a mathematician, that of two contradictory propositions, that for which there is a preponderance of evidence, ought to be believed in preference to the other, although the amount of evidence falls far short of demonstration. A step of reasoning in mathematics is clear and satisfactory when once perceived, which is also the case in other subjects; for in the the vagueness and unsatisfactoryness accompanying any discussion properly conducted, originates not in the reasoning, but in the uncertainty, and sometimes in the multiplicity of the principles involved. A distinction, however, must be made between difficulty and uncertainty, for they are not necessarily connected, at least if difficulty be estimated by the degree of exercise required of the higher faculties. The converse of this, however, that is the union of difficulty with certainty in principles, is constantly experienced by the mathematician; for such is the complexity arising from the multiplicity of the principles involved in some subjects, that notwithstanding the certainty of its principles and the perfection of its language and the almost magical power of the higher, calculus, they have baffled the most resolute efforts of the most able and vigorous minds; and had its language been less perfect, there are many subjects already thoroughly investigated, the difficulties of which would have been unsurmountable. It is an undoubted fact that many men of reflecting minds have been addicted to the study of mathematics, which proves that there is an adaptation between it and minds of this complexion, or that it is fitted to afford their powers sufficient exercise. Many celebrated mathematicians, too, have been very eminent for acquirements in general knowledge. In the science of mathematics there is also great scope for the exercise of taste, for, since taste consists in the judicious selection of the fittest and most agreeable and most efficient means to accomplish an end, there must be an opportunity for its exercise in the discussion of scientific as well as literary subjects; and the qualities of unity, clearness, force and elegance thus belong to scientific as well as to literary composition. Mathematics, it is true, cannot afford information respecting the principles of other subjects any more than natural philosophy or chemistry; but it possesses the peculiar advantage that every branch of science tends rapidly toward a state of perfection in proportion as it admits of mathematical investigation. Since the science of theoretical mathematics consists almost entirely of a continued chain of reasoning, it affords in a given period of study, many more examples of this process than any other subject. A mind, therefore, disciplined by this invigorating pursuit, and also improved by the study of other branches, will certainly be the best qualified for investigating either necessary or contingent truth.

Mr. President and fellow teachers, I have treated very imperfectly the general question, but I have no doubt that in this convention will be found many able teachers ready to express their views and discuss this subject in detail, and whether the scene of your labors be in the cities of Victoria, Nanaimo, Vancouver or New Westminster, in some secluded valley, or on the slope of some lofty hillside, whose crust but half conceals the mineral treasures beneath, wherever located you will be advocating the cause of educational progress and true mental acumen, and great is the reward that awaits the faithful laborer in the field of intellectual strength while advocating the study of mathematics as extensively as may be in the free public schools of this city and of this province. Do not say there is no time or room in the course; if you desire to educate thoroughly, you must fix the attention of your pupils and develop early in them that reasoning power they need to use so extensively during the whole period of their education. You can do this best by a timely and judicious use of mathematics.

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

Well, That Depends.

It has paid us. On Saturday, the 5th instant, we advertised 20 per cent. off all Clothing. We have been rushing ever since, although some of our customers had to climb over a pile of rubbish about as high as a six-rail fence. If the streets were all full of rubbish it would be better for the town. It's a sign of progress.

OUR SALE STILL CONTINUES. We are bound to clean out our summer stocks. Better lose our profit than carry them over. We have piles of BOYS' SUITS left. We are not selling as many as we expected. Probably on account of the difficulty in getting to our store.

Ladies, it will pay you to go around the block. We mean to clear them out. You SAVE 20 PER CENT. on all Clothing.

COAL PROSPECTS IMPROVING.

The New Vancouver Coal Company Opening Up Fine Seams.

The Free Press announces that the long continued explorations in what is known as No. 4 Slope, of the New Vancouver Coal Company, has resulted in opening up a splendid seam of coal over four feet in thickness, the indications pointing most strongly to a remarkably fine and well-defined seam of a superior coal. The roof and pavement are all that could be desired as promising a profitable seam of coal. This seam of coal is situated in close proximity to the South Field mine, belonging to the same company and on the line of the railway to the loading wharves. The output of this mine can therefore be made at once available in meeting the brisk demand for the New Vancouver coal.

The No. 1, or Esplanade shaft, of the same company, after many and varied ups and downs, that have required the utmost skill and perseverance of the management to overcome, have opened on to a splendid and regularly defined seam of coal of extra thickness, which promises to prove of the greatest value to the company and the city. This mine being within the city limits, a more than ordinary interest is manifested by the citizens. It is more than probable that this rich reward of the perseverance and enterprise of the company, will be the means of a shaft being sunk on the company's property at Protection Point, about a mile distant from the business centre of this city. The further this seam is "won" the better are the returns and indications.

THE INDIGNATION MEETING.

The Resolution Adopted at the Meeting on Saturday Last.

The following is the resolution adopted at the indignation meeting held on Saturday.

Mr. Burt, Secretary, then read the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, we know that the many are wiser than the few;

And whereas, The Miners and Mine Laborers' Protective Association, has through its respective officers tried its utmost to make a settlement of this unfortunate deadlock at Wellington;

And whereas, the stubbornness of Dunsmuir & Sons directly retards the progress and development of our fair Province, by checking immigration, unsettling legitimate business, causing pecuniary distress among business men, and want, suffering and anxiety among the working classes. The late Hon. R. Dunsmuir, and the present widow and orphans, has been most liberally dealt with by the people of this fair Province, having been in the short space of fifteen years lifted from their almost chronic state of starvation to their present affluent position, when their wealth can only be estimated by millions if it can be estimated at all.

Whereas, the action of Dunsmuir & Sons in refusing to deal with their employees and by playing their last trump card, by the wholesale evictions they contemplate, is such as to cause all true Canadians to blush for their fellow citizens;

Whereas, the action of the Dunsmuirs is contrary to all Christian brotherhood and love, creating as it does class hatred and antipathy;

Be it therefore resolved, that this meeting most emphatically and unreservedly condemn the action of evicting the people from their humble homes;

And be it further resolved, that we pledge ourself to support and cherish, to extend the brotherly love and sympathy our brothers of Wellington stand so much in need of, thereby putting a noble example to the soulless corporation of Wellington.

Messrs. Boyce, Keith, Campbell, Hilbert and Burt were the speakers. Each expressed himself strongly on the on the question under discussion, and the resolution was carried without a dissentient voice.

Hip Lung & Co.

What threatened to be a long drawn out complicated case of litigation arising out of Chinese disputes was brought happily to an end this forenoon by an amicable arrangement between the litigants, effected through the instrumentality of [illegible] and will probably result in Hip Lung & Co., occupying once more their former commercial position. The trouble arose from the desire of one of the proprietors to retire from the firm, to which his partners were not anxious to accede. The retiring partner Wong Soy Chu, however, being firm in demanding dissolution, brought the matter to a focus by having a receiver appointed over the estate. This soon brought about the desired effect. A note was duly given and endorsed and the receiver gives up possession to-day and the store will be once more attended to a la Chinois.

Stairbuilders' Shop.

Frank Stevens and Leonard Cousins have started a stairbuilders' shop on Government street opposite Johnson. Walker & Flett's mill. Mr. Stevens is a practical stairbuilder, and Mr. Cousins a first class joiner. Good work will be done, both being persevering steady young men, acquainted with the details of the business they have undertaken.

To such, Hastie & Erskine have pleasure in announcing that another carload of elegant Bedroom Suits, Extension Tables, Bookcases, Sideboards, etc., have arrived, and that they will be sold CHEAP for CASH at 52 Government street.

The Elder's Position.

When the steamer Olympian passed Point Wilson last evening the U. S. revenue cutter Corwin was trying to pull the steamer Geo. W. Elder off the rocks, but was unsuccessful and a tug was on her way from Port Townsend to help her. Marine men say that the Elder is in an ugly position the bottom being very rocky where she is lying. The bark Tidal Wave is on the beach two miles this side of Point Wilson and is in a better position than the Elder.

The boat got off late last night and is due here anytime to go into the dry dock if the Esplogie can be got out in time, to be examined.

Did Not Live There.

An employee at the Ross Bay cemetery called at the TIMES office this afternoon to state that the maniac arrested on Saturday by the Provincial police has not been living for the past week among the graves, as was stated by the morning paper. The unfortunate man was employed at the cemetery to look after the flowers and plants, but of late has been drinking heavily, and latterly became possessed with the idea that he was to be killed. He is doing well at the provincial jail.

City Hall Addition.

The archway between the old and new city hall buildings has now been cut through, and the result is a roomy look decidedly for the better. The air of stuffiness has given away to a freer and more open appearance. The lower offices are now being rapidly completed, the carpenters and plasterers being nearly through. The painters will come next to be followed by the furnishers, and ere long the commodious quarters will be ready for occupancy, a consummation devoutedly to be wished by those immediately interested.

A Quarter of a Million.

One of the prominent contractors and builders of Victoria told a TIMES man to-day that nearly a quarter of a million of dollars were outstanding due to builders on jobs as yet uncompleted, but which would be payable in a few weeks. This, he said, was a good sign, as it showed that a large amount of building was going on, and that a body of contractors did business in Victoria who were not always on short work without drawing up to the last cent.

Legal Licenses.

No action has as yet been taken in the matter of making a test case of the non-payment of the legal license exacted by the city. The city barristers, Messrs. Eberts & Taylor, are to institute proceedings at an early date, and the gentleman against whom the powers of the law will be arraigned will probably be Mr. J. P. Walls, secretary of the Law Society. An effort will be made to have the matter settled at the next session of the County Court.

A FENCE IN THE ROAD.

A Property Owner Objects to the Electric Street Car Line.

The track layers of the Esquimalt extension of the Electric Street railway were somewhat surprised to-day to find a strong fence impeding their further progress. The fence was built across that portion of the road adjoining Mr. Gerow's house near Esquimalt station. Mr. Gerow is at present out of the Province, he being a seal hunter on board of the schooner E. B. Marvin, of which vessel he owns a share. The fence was built by orders of Mrs. Gerow, acting under advice of counsel.

It seems that the land through which the Esquimalt road now runs was in 1861 owned by Capt. Nagle, formerly harbor master, since deceased. In that year the Government ran the road through, and on the records there is no entry of any protest on the part of Capt. Nagle, or of any consent to the running of the road either. It is on the latter basis that a stop to the track laying has been made. The land in that vicinity was sold by Capt. Nagle to others and subdivided into lots, but until now no question of the legal claim of the Government to the road has been made. Legal experts say that the claim must now fall to the ground, as after twenty years the law of custom would nullify any claims which might be made. Mr. Fairall, the brewer, has also objected to the tracks of the company being laid opposite his property, and in consequence of this the track-layers have stopped work thereabouts, and have commenced the other side of the E. & N. R.R. track, and are now rapidly working Esquimaltwards.

The officers of the company say that the road has got to be completed to Esquimalt. That the Government gave them the right of way and the right must be respected, but to avoid trouble and litigation, things are allowed to remain in statu quo until the Lands and Works Department gives a decision regarding Mrs. Gerow's claim.

The path to Esquimalt is a thorny one for the railway, as the Esquimalt Water Works Co. have objected to the laying of the tracks over the lines of the water pipes. This trouble can be got over though, for the railroad can go the other side. Why the water works people should object, though is hard to say, for in Victoria the water pipes are crossed in hundreds of places and no evil results follow.

Naturally the building of a street railway line enhances the value of the property it passes, but in this instance no reason for the objections are given.

No Place for Loafers.

The other day a fat and lazy looking Italian landed in Victoria with a hurdy-gurdy on wheels, which instrument of torture he commenced to turn loose on an innocent public. Sergeant Walker's alert ear caught the sharp set tone of the machine, and he at once interviewed the padrone who turned the crank, and politely informed the public nuisance that a special permit had first to be obtained from the mayor. The Italian, who by the way is a lusty and able looking man, applied to his worship for permission to "make do play," but as the case was not one of charity, the mayor very properly refused, and the itinerant will be obliged to either leave here or go to work. Accompanying the Italian was a small mite of humanity about four years of age who carried a tin cup to collect coin. Those who knew the characteristics of the Italian organ-grinder will pity the unfortunate child. It is to be hoped that the day will never come when the padrone system with all its horrors is introduced in Victoria. The Chinese are bad enough, but the padrones—

The union has now a large number of members and holds weekly meetings, when lively discussions take place.

Promoted.

Captain Dickson, for a number of years 1st officer on the steamer Olympian, has taken command of the steamer North Pacific vice Capt. Green resigned. Capt. Dickson has many friends both in this city and on the Sound, all of whom will hear with pleasure of his promotion which is well merited. He was always courteous and painstaking while on the Olympian and in that way won the respect of his employers and those who were under him.

The Johnson Street Sewer.

Notices to the number of nearly 200 have been served by the city surveyor on property owners along the line of the Johnson street sewer, to the effect that proper connection must be made with the said sewer within 30 days or proceedings will be taken to enforce the by-law dealing with the matter. Several who have been notified have signified their readiness to do what is required. This is well, for it seems a farce to pay close upon $50,000 for a sewer and then to have only one or two places make a use of it. For the sake of health and the betterment of the bad condition of Johnson street ravine the by-law must be enforced.
